

Constitution, and which the two cities could neither constitute nor abolish. If the State abolishes the office following the union, we can't control it, said Mr. Pollard. "If the State abolishes it, we must have a Commonwealth's Attorney, we will have to pay the salary. The Constitution of the State says there must be one Commonwealth's Attorney for every county and every city in the State. There is no provision for two in any county. Such an action would be to make ourselves absurd. If one attorney for the Commonwealth cannot handle the business of two counties, then we can provide that he shall have an assistant. In the event of consolidation, however, the Commonwealth's Attorney of Richmond would have exclusive jurisdiction, and it would be his duty to prosecute all cases arising in the city."

Mr. Goodwyn held that the office was a necessary and useful one, that a court could not well get on without the prosecuting officer. He accepted the suggestion of the creation of an office of assistant City Attorney. Mr. Pollard said he had not provided such an office, as there was no provision for it in the memorandum of agreement. Mr. Goodwyn replied that it did not matter for it in terms, but that there were many clauses in the agreement which had to be amplified and explained. Mr. Pollard replied that he had not found it so in making his draft, and went on to argue that if there is to be any office created it must be an assistant to the Commonwealth's Attorney of Richmond, but that neither the committee nor the two City Councils could provide such a State position.

Jurisdiction of Court.
Chairman Pollard, of the Richmond committee, wanted to know how such an assistant was to be elected, and whether his duties would be confined to the prosecution of cases. He also wanted to know whether the proposed Corporation Court, part two, would be limited to business originating in the Southside. Mr. Adams held that the assistant, if there is to be one, should be for both Richmond and Manchester, to serve in either court as the Commonwealth's Attorney may direct. Colonel Graham and Mr. Balfour thought that such an official would be necessary, and the whole section was referred back to the two attorneys to prepare a section which will cover the creation of office of assistant attorney for the Commonwealth and define his duties.

School Facilities.
Section 10, in which the agreement provides for "adequate school facilities," was amended by Mr. Goodwyn to provide for schools "as good as those in Richmond." Mr. Pollard held that that would certainly lead to trouble, that some capricious person might complain if Richmond did not duplicate the John Marshall High School in Manchester. Mr. Goodwyn said he merely wanted a guarantee that the schools would average up. He said he did not expect at once to make the schools as good as the best in Richmond, but that they must be as good as the average. After separate conferences the Richmond committee refused to accept the amendment, standing in the name of "adequate" schools, and the Manchester committee asked that it be passed by.

Fire Protection.
The argument then came up on fire protection, on much the same basis. Mr. Goodwyn wanted fire protection such as would enable the city to "have the same rates of insurance as obtain in Richmond." Mr. Pollard said it would put the city absolutely in the hands of the insurance companies, which might make almost any unreasonable demands, and the city would have to recede. Mr. Adams held that it was largely of no consequence in the brick and slate sections of Richmond, and that the Southside city did not have the same pressure or supply to justify such rates.

Chairman Pollard declared the clause impracticable in that it put the city absolutely in the hands of the insurance companies, and the committee disagreed, each standing by its own proposition. Chairman Pollard announced with some heat: "We agreed on a plan, and our ordinance is in the exact words that I agreed on. Now you have enlarged on it, and we reject that enlargement."

Firemen and Policemen.
The fight of the night was over the retention permanently of firemen and policemen. The agreement and the act for the consolidation of cities provide for the immediate transfer of firemen and policemen from the cities of Manchester to the respective forces in the consolidated city, with the payment and rights of men on the Richmond force. The Manchester committee wished to insert a paragraph providing that their length of service on the Manchester force should be considered in making promotions, and that their age should not be used against them in re-election.

Mr. Jones said he was informed that the police board of Richmond wanted to elect new men to the force who were over thirty-five years of age. He expressed the opinion that the men transferred from the Manchester force, when they came up for re-election after serving their unexpired term, might be regarded as new men, and held to be ineligible on account of age. Mr. Pollard translated the law to mean that they would be transferred with all the rights, privileges and rank which they now hold, but reminded the committee that the police and fire boards of Richmond are separate chartered institutions, and that over which the City Council has no control, save to appropriate money from year to year for their maintenance.

No agreement adopted by the Council, he held, would be binding on the police board to re-elect any man if that Department, which is independent of the Council, has for the men transferred, however, he was positive that they would be taken up for re-election as old men, with no consideration of service, considered, not as new men against whom the age limit might apply. Mr. Pollard emphasized the importance of the clause, which might be inserted in the hands of the boards to keep in the service decrepit old men, unfit for active duty.

In Interest of Office-Holders.
Mr. Goodwyn argued for his revision of the great length, and the clause was finally referred to the two City Attorneys to attempt a revision. It was then a few minutes of midnight, and on motion to adjourn being made, Mr. Pollard emphatically objected that the whole night had been spent in looking after the interests of the office-holders of Manchester, and that the taxpayers should have some consideration. Chairman Brown re-examined the clause, and said that his committee should have some definite assurance of just what to expect with which to go back to their people. With several points of difference not yet reached, and a legislative amendment which will enable the union to be effective by the census of 1910, yet unreached, the committee adjourned to meet on Monday night at 8 o'clock.

DISTURBS SOCIAL ORDER

Wealth Taken to England by American Girl.
NEW YORK, January 4.—Miss Ethel Arnold, sister of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, who has just arrived on her second voyage to the United States, is the daughter of the great American fortune brought into her country.

To say that the American girl as a member of the aristocracy was a menace would be ridiculous, she said yesterday. "England has been singularly fortunate in the young American women grafted upon her society, but the outpouring of this enormous wealth in a nation which has been literally tilted to the side by the influx of the social order. It is of necessity a corruption. Unlimited means give an impetus to the economic revolution upon those in the same class of life without vast revenues. And it gives the man or the woman to whom wealth is an alliance possession without responsibility."

Miss Arnold had much to say of the recent visit of the King of Portugal to England in search of a wife. Miss Arnold thought the eldest daughter of the Princess Royal, now Duchess of Gloucester, the only matrimonial opportunity in the royal family, and this was seriously considered, but it was not permitted to her. The Princess of Connaught was adjudged "far too old" for the boy. It was the master of religion Miss Arnold saw the immediate objection to a Portuguese-English alliance, for the British crown has felt bitterly the deviation of its daughters from the Established Church. As an old friend of the Asquiths, Miss Arnold declined to discuss the affair of the poet Watson.

"The serpent of the serpent," she said, "is the serpent of the serpent." "Since Mrs. Pankhurst has put out the role of the Mue, Sans-Gene of the moment, and assumed the mantle of the serpent, we women everywhere are favorable to the cause will consider it 'inexpedient.' Both the first lady and the second lady of the ranks of the disaffected, the campaign of violence has already lost votes for women in the recent Borough Council elections, where out of fifty-one candidates only five were put in."

"To say that the ballot for women is not coming would be absurd. It was largely of no consequence in the brick and slate sections of Richmond, and that the Southside city did not have the same pressure or supply to justify such rates."

Chairman Pollard declared the clause impracticable in that it put the city absolutely in the hands of the insurance companies, and the committee disagreed, each standing by its own proposition.

BOYCOTT TO BEAT TRUSTS
Real War on High Food Prices Started by Committee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 4.—A real war on high food prices that will hit the food combines where it will hurt is being planned in detail by the Central Committee in Washington, that proposes the organization of a boycott association of 1,300,000 families throughout the country.

The first battle of the war will be fought against the beef trust, according to E. L. Scharf, at whose home forty persons, several of them Congressmen and Congressmen's wives, met to lay definite plans for the boycott. The leaders believe that in certain cities prices are reasonable. These will be exempt from the operation of the boycott, and it will be enforced wherever the price is plainly exorbitant. It is the theory of the promoters that the sudden dropping of price in custom will demoralize the beef trust and reduce the price to the retailer.

The fight is a legal boycott which we propose to lead in resisting the subject to-day. "It is the right and privilege of any number of citizens to refuse to buy commodities when their prices are exorbitant."

common knowledge convinces them that the price is an extortion. "Home of the members of Congress who have advised us are informed that the relation of the beef packers to the transportation lines is so delicate that a combined refusal to buy beef in any given territory will so derange the trust's distribution machinery that it will at once accede to the demand for a fair price. We believe that we have not only the active but the only legitimate method of protesting against the consumer against the extortion which prevails in many of the trades controlling the markets for foodstuffs."

NEARER TO "MEN HIGHER UP"
Underlings in Sugar Frauds Will Confess, It Is Thought.

NEW YORK, January 4.—In their efforts to bring to justice the "men higher up" in the sugar frauds, the government's prosecuting officers are confident that they have broken down the determination of the convicted underlings to shield the real offenders, and that these will soon be in the toils.

To a direct question as to whether any of the convicted or indicted men had confessed, Special Prosecutor Wilfred T. Denison replied that he was not at liberty to say. It is regarded as significant, however, that Ernest Gerhardt, former superintendent of the American Sugar Refining Company, at Williamsburg, who is under indictment and pleaded not guilty, withdrew his plea to-day and filed a demurrer to the indictment. Argument on the demurrer will be heard in a few days.

The prosecuting officers, through the confession of a former checker of the American Sugar Refining Company, are said to have put the government in possession of valuable information. This man is not a resident of this city at the present time, and he had his choice between confession and indictment.

By reason of this confession, it is declared, the government prosecutors have determined to oppose vigorously the attempt for a new trial for the convicted men, former employees of the American Sugar Refining Company. They are Oliver Spitzer, former superintendent of docks, and Thomas Kehoe, John R. Coyle, Edward A. Boyle and Patrick J. Hennessey, former checkers.

TO LOCK UP "PISTOL TOTERS"
Col. Jack Chinn Has a Bill Dooming Them to Asylum.

LEXINGTON, Ky., January 4.—Col. "Jack" P. Chinn, Kentucky's most famous hunter, turfman and statesman, who will represent Mercer county in the lower house of the Legislature, which convenes next Tuesday, has prepared a bill which he will introduce prescribing a new kind of punishment for the "pistol toters."

He says that seven out of every ten men charged with murder plead emotional insanity, and that he will have law enacted placing persons carrying pistols in an insane asylum for a short term, to be so confined that they will be compelled to listen day and night to the ravings of the most violent patients in the institutions. He framed this law on the theory, he says, that as most of the murderers plead insanity at their trial they must be presumed to be crazy when they buckle on their armor.

Colonel Chinn says he has been forced most of his life to carry arms for protection against the crazy, and that hundreds of others do so for the same reason, but the proposed law will not only prevent the carrying of firearms by would-be murderers, but will relieve him and his kind from having to go about like human arsenals.

Colonel Chinn will also introduce a bill making it a misdemeanor for a preacher to discuss politics in the pulpit.

SEARCH FOR MISSING HEIRESS
Detectives Believe That Girl and Walter Are in Hiding in New York.

NEW YORK, January 4.—Search for Roberta B. de Janon, the sixteen-year-old Philadelphia heiress, who disappeared from the hotel where she was staying in Philadelphia last week, was kept up by detectives in this city to-day. It was believed that the girl was in hiding here.

It became known to-day that an elderly man, a young girl, and a woman resembling Cohen and Miss de Janon, had applied for apartments at three different places on the upper West Side yesterday.

At Standstill in Philadelphia.
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., January 4.—So far as this young girl is concerned, the search for Miss Roberta B. de Janon, the young heiress, and Ferdinand Cohen, the hotel waiter, who disappeared last week, is at a standstill. No information, it is said, had been received up to early afternoon by the girl's millionaire grandfather that would lead to a clue to their whereabouts.

Mrs. Julia Cohen, the wife of the waiter, says she is losing hope of ever seeing her daughter. "I have done all I can to help him and my husband and Miss de Janon," she said, "and now I am ready to give up. I have no faintest idea of where they are, and I begin to doubt if they will ever be caught alive."

OPEN DOOR TO COAST STATES
Japanese Statesman Tells What His Country Should Demand.

SEATTLE, Wash., January 4.—Ayawo Hattori, member of the Imperial Japanese diet, who is making a tour of the Pacific coast States, yesterday gave information on the relations of the Japanese to the United States, said last night that Japan should have demanded an open-door to the coast States at the time of the Portsmouth conference when Japan guaranteed an open-door in Manchuria, but one big question for the United States to consider with regard to Japan," said Mr. Hattori, "and that is to give my countrymen the right to trade here with Europeans. It is true that foreigners in Japan are not permitted full rights in owning land, but Japan was under the feudal system only forty years ago, and our political progress must be gradual."

"There has been some talk concerning the probability of Japan seizing the Philippines. No anxiety need be felt on that score. Japan has a heavy burden in Korea and Formosa, and it is unlikely that my country would be able to take on the heavy burdens in the Philippines. My government knows what it has cost."

Manufacturers Urged Not to Take Part in Protests.

NEW YORK, January 4.—"With Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell not only participants, but moving spirits in the movement, it is officers in good standing in the Civic Federation, I cannot reconcile my own mind with what seems to me to be such an extremely inconsistent proposition, nor can I find it in my best conscience to wink at the great danger to the best interests of our common country that lies hidden in the indomitable by your organization of these men and the doctrines they preach, and which, in so far as they are concerned, they execute in the name of the Civic Federation, and for which that organization will some day have to recognize its responsibility."

John Kirby, Jr., secretary of the president of the National Association of Manufacturers, in a letter to Seth Low, president of the National Civic Federation, thus frankly expresses his opinion that the Manufacturers' Association should not accept the invitation to participate in the coming Civic Federation conference at Washington.
